To Whom It May Concern:

Our organization has had the good fortune of working with Sean Morton on two occasions: first, as an intern in 2013; and second, as a mobile app developer in 2014 and 2015. Sean possesses a unique blend of intelligence, focus, and character that is difficult to find in any employee – and nearly impossible to find in a young man his age.

Sean spent the past several months building a mobile app for CuraLinc's employee assistance program (EAP) clients. This app will not only allow EAP participants to access behavioral health consultation and resources from their mobile phone, it will also help CuraLinc break down barriers and 'destigmatize' counseling for individuals who suffer from depression, stress and anxiety. Throughout the production process, Sean was more to us than just a programmer. He was heavily involved in everything from early-stage white board strategy sessions to post-rollout modifications – and he was always able to communicate with us in layman's terms, which made our team of professionals feel at ease.

If it's not already obvious, I recommend Sean to any employer who wants a high-character, hard-working employee who can move effortlessly between different groups or classes of his co-workers. Please call or email me if you want or need additional information.

Best Regards,
